

The regional property market was given a shot in the arm – the body, the leg and the head – at an event at Blythe Valley Business Park located at Junction 4 M42, Solihull.

The great and good of the regional commercial property industry were shown around the business park– before taking part in a full-blooded game of paint ball.

Kate Smith of Liberty Property Trust, owners of Blythe Valley Park, said: “We invited commercial property agents from around the region to showcase the opportunities that we have here at the Park. By holding the paintball event on the Park we were able to ensure that they saw some of the available development plots and buildings up close and personal. The day was all about having fun and it was a great morale boost for all of the teams involved.

“The paintball was highly competitive and I am sure there were some personal and professional scores settled!”

Blythe Valley Park is developed and managed by Liberty Property Trust UK, in partnership with Doughty Hanson & Co Real Estate and is home to Arup, Virgin Active, Regus, Siemens, Oracle, UK Athletics and Scott Wilson.

The competition was won by Team Seals captained by Jon Ottowell of Savills.
